1. Introduction

College Community Members, as defined below, are required to act with honesty and integrity and comply with applicable laws at all times when transacting business of the American College of Greece [henceforth, "ACG"]. This Policy specifically prohibits College Community Members from engaging in bribery of a Public Official in relation with ACG business or other activities, in order to obtain or retain business or otherwise secure an improper advantage. College Community Members must comply with applicable anti-bribery laws of the foreign countries with which they carry out international activities, including the provisions of the U.S. Foreign Corrupt Practices Act [henceforth, "FCPA"], as well as with applicable anti-bribery laws of their local country.

2. Scope of the Policy

College Community Members include:

- Faculty, other academic appointees, staff, and other employees of ACG and its affiliates;
- Students;
- Members of the Board of Trustees;
- Consultants, vendors, contractors and third parties doing business with, or on behalf of, ACG and its affiliates; and
- Volunteers associated with ACG.

3. Definitions

3.1. Public Official

Public Official is defined as any:

- Employee, officer or agent of a government;
- Political candidate of a party; or
- Employee of a:
 - Government owned or controlled commercial enterprise, university, research institution, health care facility or instrumentality;
 - Public international organization -e.g., United Nations, World Bank, World Health Organization- or political party.

3.2. Bribery

Bribery is defined as the direct or indirect through a third party:

3.2.1. Offering, giving, directing or promising to another person, including a Public Official's family member, anything of value with the intention to induce or reward a Public Official to:

3.2.1.1. Undertake an official act or decision;

- 3.2.1.2. Violate their official duties;
- 3.2.1.3. Use their influence to affect an act or decision of the government; or
- 3.2.1.4. Give an improper advantage.
- 3.2.2. Requesting, agreeing to receive, accepting, or directing a financial or other advantage for oneself or others if such advantage is intended to induce or reward improper performance of one's responsibilities or duties or to gain an improper advantage; or
- 3.2.3. Engaging in (3.2.1.) or (3.2.2.) without the intention to induce or reward or gain an improper advantage, but which could reasonably be interpreted as such an inducement or reward.

Forms of Bribery may include, but not be limited to:

- Cash, or cash equivalents such as stock shares;
- Unreasonable gifts, entertainment services, travel expenses or other hospitality services;
- Unwarranted discounts, rebates or excessive commissions- e.g. to sales or marketing agents;
- Unwarranted allowances or expense reimbursements;
- Political/charitable contributions;
- Uncompensated use of ACG services or facilities; or
- Kickbacks.

4. Due Diligence of Agents, Vendors and Other Third Parties

When entering into a relationship with a third party that may interact with a Public Official on behalf of ACG, College Community Members should complete sufficient due diligence to confirm that the retained individual or organization does not have a history of corrupt payments, and that they understand and agree that they are not authorized to engage in bribery on behalf of ACG. The level of due diligence required will vary depending on the level of risk involved in the underlying arrangement or transaction- e.g., whether the third party will be interacting directly with Public Officials on behalf of ACG or whether the services will occur in a country that involves a high risk of corruption.

College Community Members should ensure that the third parties they interact with do not have a history of violations of anti-bribery laws, provide them with a copy of this Policy, and regularly audit their activities to ensure ongoing compliance. Any agreements with third parties should include provisions that they will comply with the FCPA and all other applicable local anti-bribery laws (See a sample agreement provision at the end of this Policy on "10. Appendix").

5. Responsibilities of College Community Members

College Community Members must assess the risk of bribery in the activities under their purview and take appropriate care to prevent and detect bribery and ensure compliance with ACG policies. Certain countries have a high incidence of corruption, and particular care should be taken when undertaking activities in or involving those countries. For information regarding high risk countries, see the Transparency International Corruption Perceptions Index (<https://www.transparency.org/en/countries/greece>)

Depending on the individual circumstances, appropriate steps may involve:

- 5.1. Additional training of employees and other third parties concerning this Policy,
- 5.2. Conducting appropriate due diligence before engaging third party vendors, agents or partners, and
- 5.3. Ensuring that contracts contain anti-bribery and compliance with law provisions.

Failure to take appropriate steps to prevent and detect bribery creates legal risk for ACG and potential personal liability for the individuals involved.

6. Consequences of Violations

Violations of this Policy may result in appropriate disciplinary action up to and including termination of employment or other relationships with ACG. Conduct that constitutes a violation may also expose ACG and College Community Members to criminal or civil penalties in the United States, Greece, and elsewhere.

7. Reporting

Known or suspected violations of this Policy must be reported immediately to the Office of Human Resources or, in accordance with ACG's Whistleblower Policy, to the Designated Officer for the receipt of and follow-up on reports and any other College official entrusted with this responsibility (See "5.2 Reporting Violations" of ACG's Whistleblower Policy).

8. Non-Retaliation

ACG prohibits retaliation against any person for making a report in good faith or cooperating in an investigation by a regulatory authority, law enforcement agency, member or committee of Congress, in compliance with this Policy. Individuals who take retaliatory action will be subject to disciplinary action up to and including termination of employment (See also ACG's Whistleblower Policy)

9. Review of this Policy

ACG periodically reviews this Policy and reserves the right to amend any and all of the sections, at any time, in accordance with the needs and requirements of the institution.

The codes of practice set out in this Policy will be reviewed on an annual basis.
